CAHO, PFPSF join forces to emphasise critical importance of patient engagement in healthcare

Engaging patients in their healthcare is a crucial step toward addressing the issue of medical errors. Patient Advisory Councils are central to this effort, serving as platforms for patients to voice their concerns and influence decision-making processes. CAHO passionately advocates for the establishment of PACs to ensure that patients' voices are heard, integrated, and valued within the healthcare system.

THE Consortium of Accredited Healthcare Organisations (CAHO) and Patient for Patient Safety Foundation (PFPSF), on Saturday, launched the 'Patient Advisory Council' to improve the patient safety in hospitals.

Preventable medical errors are a major cause for breach of trust between medical practitioners and patients, explained Dr Alexander Thomas, Founder President, CAHO. Stating that mis-communication is the reason for 70 per cent medical errors in hospitals, Dr Thomas highlighted the need to involve patients as collaborator in the entire treatment process, and help them identify areas of improvement to reduce medical errors too.

Ahead of World Patient Safety Day observed on September 17, the advisory council was launched in Bengaluru on the sidelines of WHO's theme "Engaging Patients for Patient Safety". The council will educate the patients about MRI safety, surgical interventions, anaesthesia, vaccination and geriatric care among other things.

Citing examples of administering improper dosage or wrong blood transfusion, experts said if patients are educated about following instructions in prescriptions, verifying names and expiry dates of medicines, or informed about surgical procedures; it will allow them to intervene at every step, reducing the possibility of a medical error.

Private hospitals across India are being encouraged to establish Patient Advisory Councils (PACs) as part of a joint initiative by the Consortium of Accredited Healthcare Organizations (CAHO) and the Patient for Patient Safety Foundation (PFPSF). PACs will actively involve patients in decision-making processes regarding their treatment and care, says CAHO founder Dr Alexander Thomas.

Approximately 22,000 hospitals under CAHO, the Association of Healthcare Providers India (AHPI), and the Association of National Board

Accredited Institutions (ANBAI) are expected to be part of this initiative. This includes a section of hospitals under the Private Hospitals and Nursing Homes Association (PHANA) in Karnataka.

Each PAC will include long-term patients and their caregivers, especially those representing civic groups, patient support organisations, and NGOs. It will be chaired by a doctor and will include healthcare professionals and administrators.

As per the guidelines, the PAC should ideally consist of two to four patient representatives for every hospital staff member, with a maximum of 20 members. These councils should convene at least once every one or two months. "If the patient or their family is not satisfied with the treatment or has issues with the hospital facilities, they can approach the PAC, which will help resolve the issue," said Thomas.

About 70% of medical errors happen due to improper communication between doctor and patient, or among health professionals, he added. The initiative encourages hospitals to collect Patient-Reported Experience Measures, which are patients' direct feedback after hospitalisation. Patient experiences will be compiled and circulated to hospitals.

On World Patient Safety Day 2023, the Consortium of Accredited Healthcare Organisations (CAHO) and the Patient for Patient Safety Foundation (PFPSF) are emphasizing the critical importance of patient engagement in healthcare. They are doing so through the establishment of Patient Advisory Councils (PACs) and the promotion of Patient Reported Experience Measures (PREMs). The theme for this year's World Patient Safety Day, 'Engaging patients for patient safety', perfectly aligns with their mission.

Dr. Alexander Thomas, Founder President and Patron of CAHO, highlights the vital role of trust and communication in the patient-provider relationship. Instances of medical errors can erode this trust, impacting not only the patient's confidence in their care but also undermining the broader healthcare system. Dr. Nagendra Swamy SC, Patron of CAHO, stresses the importance of recognizing patients as active collaborators in their healthcare journey. Research has shown that when patients are engaged, there is a significant improvement in safety, patient satisfaction, and overall health outcomes.
